Dear Hiring Team,

I've watched Northwind quietly become the default for mid-market ops teams — and the new automation suite is exactly the kind of "make the hard thing one click" product I love to build. I'd like to lead it.

At Acme Cloud I owned the analytics dashboard from a vague "we need insights" brief to a feature 70% of weekly-active accounts now rely on — by cutting scope to the one chart that answered the user's real question. When mobile NPS stalled at 14, I ran the discovery that traced it to a broken first-run, and shipped the fix that took it to 38. I don't start from features; I start from the job the user is hiring us for.

What draws me to Northwind specifically is that you measure success by customer outcomes, not output — that's how I work, and it's rarer than it should be.

I'd love to talk about where the automation suite goes next.

Sincerely,

Jordan Avery
